Competition for Filmmakers of Colour

Win the opportunity to make a documentary that will be broadcast on CBC and VisionTV.

Ever feel like the same stories get told on screen over and over again? Got a story of your own? If you're an emerging filmmaker of colour, then enter the National Film Board's 2002 Reel Diversity Competition.

The Reel Diversity Competition will provide five successful candidates from across Canada with the opportunity to direct a broadcast quality, English-language, 40-minute NFB documentary suitable for prime time television. Reel Diversity is an NFB initiative in partnership with CBC and CBC Newsworld, the lead broadcasters, and VisionTV. The competition is open to filmmakers from visible minority groups only. Applicants must be Canadian citizens or landed immigrants, and must have at least one credit in a key creative role in a completed independent film or video production of any genre. Full-time students are not eligible to apply.

Application deadline is May 24, 2002.
There is no entry fee.
